

A big 'Thank You,' from an opportunist burglar!

Dear Resident,

Please pass on my grateful thanks, to the post person, and leaflet distributor, who kindly left items sticking out of your letter box, clearly indicating to me and other, would be thieves or burglars, that you are not at home.

What a joy it is, when so many people make my chosen occupation so easy, to carry out.

If only those who leave your letters, junk mail, or leaflets, on show, took as much care over their task, as I do, when I check out your property and see how easy it is for me to gain access and to 'liberate,' your treasured, valuable possessions.

I was pleased to find a bank statement and correspondence sticking out of your large letterbox. I am now in the process of using the bank details and personal information, so that I can use it and steal the addressee's identity, for my financial benefit!

By the way, I was also grateful to you, for leaving your side gate unlocked, and your fanlight windows open, making it easy for me to gain access.

I am sorry that I have made an untidy search of your house, but, it was necessary, in order to allow me to seek out the best, small, but valuable items, that fitted into my holdall.

By the way, I have telephoned my mate, who will be around shortly with his van, to collect your nice new television, computer and ipad. I hope you're insured!

Thank you for your generosity,

Burglar Bill

NOTES

Make sure that your letter box is accessible, and large enough to allow for normal sized letters, leaflets and small packets, to be dropped securely through the opening and out of sight.

If you are having trouble with the safe, out of sight, delivery of your mail or leaflets, speak to those responsible and ask for their co-operation. If this has no effect, go back to source, such as the manager of your local mail sorting office, or, in the case of leaflets, the distributor or company (If known).
